

Running the Gauntlet

Pearline has been through .t. but it has "got there." Every other modern improvement has had the same struggle. There's unbelief, pre udice and misunderstanding-peddlers of imitations—the fa se statements of soap makers and unscrupulous grocers to fight against. The old way is hard to leave, even if a better way is open. You can't believe that Pearline can do so much; then you can't believe that it's done safely; -in the end, you can't see how you ever did without it. That's the story of millions-full of doubt at irst, full of satisfaction at last. If you're at the doubtful stage, try it. You won't know easy washing and cleaning 'till you do.

Beware Peddlers and some grocers will ted you, this is as good as " or " the same as Pearling 11 S I VISE—but what a puff for Pearline 13, JAMES PVI E New York.

Frivolous Obstruction.

When it became apparent that no conclusion would be reached the board adjourned and the liquor agency to-day it just as dry as ever. It is an interesting fact that this year the Republican ward workers are not running the city wholly. Mayor Snew proves to be a good check upon them and the citizens will find that he is a prefitable one before the year is over.—Commercial.

It is difficult to discuss with any patience such attempts as the foregoing to claim corporation or at the place where it goes that the public interest is subserved by There is nothing in the Constitution or laws of the United States preventing a that the public interest is subserved by the persistence of a Democratio Mayor in preventing the lawful exercise of the authority tested by the people in a Board of Alderman, a majority of whom are Republicans. Aside from the anomaly of the claim that a presiding officer is empowered to create a dead-lock and prevent instead of promoting the transaction of the city's business, the issue raised by Mayor Snow has no pretense of any purpose to promote any public interest or prevent any public interest of Alderman from electing Republicans to public positions, the mayor insisting that he and the Democratic aminority—who together do not constitute a majority in number, even if he had a within the state, and that number might to vote—shall be permitted to elect.

right to vote—shall be permitted to elect. Democrats or they will obstruct and prevent the election of anybody.

There has been no pretence that the candidate chosen for City Agent by the majority of the Board of Aldermen is not eligible, and no claim that the candidate of the Democratic minority is better qualised for the place, although that question is decided by the majority of the Aldermen, but the controversy is raised solely by the declaration of the Mayor that the will evercise the power of young so as to will exercise the power of voting so as to create a tie, and prevent the effection of City Agent, with the result of cloving the Agency, in alsoch time as the four members constituting the majority of the Board of Aldermen shall consent that, the Mayor and three Democratic members may exercise their own will by electing one of their own partisans to the office. I

The closing of the Agency has been halled with selight by the saloon interest as a sort of seprisal upon the temperance people for the severe amendments to the filegor hiws at the late sexision of the Legislature; and one of the best seems to be the annogance of people who may have occasion to purchase spirits for lawful purposes and for whom the legal method of supply by the public agency has been provided.

In this matter, as in his first attempt to dictate de prevent the choice of assistant assessiors, the Mayor stands before the public plainly as a deliberate and stituborn obstructor of the orderly conduct of the business of the City Government and for no higher purpose than the assertion of his personal will that a Board of Aldermen having a clear Republican majority shall not elect Republicans to public

The Mayor cannot even take the ground that it is not desirable to have the Agency kept open, for he has twice insisted upon recording his yote in favor of having it opened under the management of one of his party friends. He is therefore solely responsible for all inconvenience and innoyance caused by the closing of the only place where people could hawfully obtain aplrita for medicinal or mechanical purposes-although he has repeatedly indicated his repunion by his vote that the Agency should be kept open, if a Demo-erat can be made Agent The people of Bangor are disposed to accord to their municipal officers all proper respect and to extend cordial support to all efforts in the public interest The Mayor of the city will be sustained in the proper exercise of all his prerogatives, without regard to politics, and the Aldernen and Councilmen elected by the people * having been thore ughly repaired, will sail from Pler 13, hast fifter, but York, for Bangor, every to transact their business, will also be supported in the legitimate exercise of all their official powers.

The public interest is not to be served by the Mayor s obstruction of the Aldermen or by the Aldermen interfering with aby right of the Mayor. The object of all government is the transaction, and not the prevention of public business. The Mayor loes not claum that he and the minority Aidermen can transact any husiness, but he insists that they shall unite to obstruct

Of course the great majority of soberminded people in our city look with regret minded people in our city look with regret and impatience upon the factions and frivolous sacrifee of the public interests by the Mayor's persistent attempts to prevent the Board of Aldermen from performing. by the action of their majority, the duties which they were chosen, and for which they are responsible to their constituents.

Two Misstatements.

Both the local and the editorial pages of the Commercial inference facts in dealing with the city agency question. There never has been a decision of the Supreme Court of this or any other State affirming the right of a Mayor to create a deadlock by his vote. On the contrary it has been judicially determined that the presiding officer of a body of which he is not a constituent menther can only give the casting vote | This point was very clearly stated in the letter of Henry H. Smith, Esq , Journal Clerk of the House of Representatives, and one of the greatest living authorities on questions of parliamentary law, but the Commercial carefully refrains from referring to this fact. On the local page of the Commercial it is stated that Alderman wiekery persisted in the statement that his order for the appointment of agent was in accord with the record of last year, although Alderman Robinson proved by the record that it was not so. As a matter of fact the order introduced by Mr. Vickery was an exact copy of a similar order pasted last year, the copy being made from the record by City Clerk Brett at the request of the Alderman from

The Commercial cannot weaken the statement of one of the leading grocery establishments in Boston that their customers will mye $150,000 a year under the new tariff, by its silly talk about an "advertising cuestout." This practical stateent from a re table house disposes of any quantity of the "carefully prepared dea" compiled by free trade editors. We are aware that other articles than groceries enter into household expenses as the people save some $60,000,000 anmally on augus as the direct result of the Scklaley bill, they are to just that extent better able to pay the increase price of best for which the McKinley tariff bill

It was contended by the company that this law was unconstitutional for the reason that it was a regulation of inter-state commerce, and that its cars could be taxed only in the State of lituois.

The Court, in an opinion by Justice Gray, uphoids the constitutionality of the law. The old rule by which personal property was supposed to follow the person of the dwner, it says, has been modified very much in modern times. In matters of taxation the question s one of legislative power and it is for each State Legislative to say whether a company's prop-

New Youx, May I3. The trial of the case of Sarah Branagh sgainst William P. Smith, involving the claims of the alleged Irish heirs of the late A. T. Stewart, was begun before Judge Wallace in the supreme court locky.

General Butler and William H. Secor appeared for the plaintiffs and Elihu Root and Joseph H. Choate represented the Stewart catate.

Long arguments were submitted qu both sides, the defense contending that Sarah Branagh, the mother of Mary Branagh, Stewart's cousin, being an alien could not as an heir acquire right to any interest in the Stewart estate.

Judge Wallace seemed inclined to take this view of the case and gave Gen. Butler until to-morrow afternoon to hand in a brief. He said he would decide the question on law points Friday afternoon.

MISSING MONMOUTH MAN

A Theory That he is St II Living—What An Officer Learned.
All inquiries as to the whereabouts after April 27 of Henry M. Donnell, the Monmouth, Me., hay merchant, still remain unanswered. A. B. Donnell, of Greene, Me., a brother of the missing man, came on yesterday, and placed the affair in the hands of the police of the city, says the Boston Herald. He brought a photograph

Boston Heraid. He brought a photograph of his brother.

Mr. A. B. Donnell says the family were tardy in calling on the authorities for ald, because it was believed that Henry would appear of his own accord in due time.

They have been slow to believe that anything serious had happened. His prolonged absence, bowever, has put the matter in another light. A vigorous search is now being prosecuted, and will be kept up until something definite is learned.

Inspector McCausland was assigned to the case, and under his guidance the brother went over the ground. The well known experience and acumen of the offi the case, and under his guidance the brother went over the ground. The well known experience and acumen of the officer caused a little more light to be thrown on Henry's movements before he disappeared, but at the fateful date, April 27, all evidence stops. What was learned is significant, in one sense, and goes far to give color to the theory now held by Mr. A. B. Donnell, that Henry is on the trail of "Simpson," his thysterious but clusive friend.

It seems that Henry returned to Monmouth after the transaction in which Simpson figured, but said nothing about it. Mr. A. B. Donnell continued: "When he left the second time be said he would probably be gone two weeks at least. This appears to me as if he intended to enter in the chase for Simpson on his own book, because he was almost sure to sell his hay in a few days after his arrival. This view of the matter was confirmed by our inquiries to-day.

"Henry serbnt most of histime after sell-

while in Boaton. Whatever in his appearance gave color to this notion is explained on the theory of temporary aberration, induced by the loss of his money and worry over not finding simpson. The latter has left no trace of his movements. So far as has already appeared, he will go down in history as an itinerant worker on mecasin slippers, who was employed by Bird & Stevens about two years ago. At that time he lodged at No. 6 Bowdoin street. He has been invisible for one and one-half years, however, until his recent brief, but profitable, visit to this city, in company with Donneil.

Inquiry at the above-mentioned lodging house last evening failed of any result in tracing either Simpson's or Fonneil's movements during the past month. They have not been there.

wallowing, plunging, almost sinking, in the pitiless sea, the foresail was clewed up and atowed after a fashion—the storm is stayall was blown out of the bolt-ropes—the trysail ripped itself to shreds and wound itself in all impossible ways about the main shrouds and running rigging. The main-topasil gave us the toughest work and the greatest danger. By superhuman efforts it was clewed up, and the boatswain, a powerfully muscular man, led the crew of main-topmen up to furl it. He managed to crawl safely into the slings of the yard, but not a man would follow him. I do not much wonder The scene must have been appalling. The yard, though of course down on the cap, was still scoventy-five feet and more from the deck. The great sail was flapping and I writhing and tugging at I like a litan, and threatened to rip yard and all into the sea. The mast whirded in giddy circles, is somelimes dipping the yard-arms in the foam; and with such sudden and violent lerks that it required all one's strength to hold on and keep from being flung overseboard. The air was full of driving soud, and btack as pitch. The wind scooped off the tops of the waves and sent them hissing through the rigging with the force of chain, shor. And the gastly phosphore escence of the sea as it wnirled and frothed around the ship and through the broken ports and over the hammock nettings, acast a deathly glare over the scene that served to make the daikness visible. The men crept down and abandoned the sail to life fath. It had four reefs in it, and these (Continued from First Page )

Slowly and painfully she swung round into the trough of the sea. It was a perflous moment. Will she live through it? No man can tell. Most likely she will h? No man can tell. Most likely she will roll herself under and go down. We brared ourselves and held our breath Both batterles rolled under out of sight. But as she came to her course, with a few tremendous lurches she shook herself clear of the immense masses of water on her decks, and rose heavily and wearily on the next wave. When she was fairly round on the port tack, it was found that the change had come. The far-seeing barometer had predicted it an hour before. And now it was here, and the wind was vering to the westward. This meant that the centre of the storm was directly north of us, and was rapidly passing. It meant formed a dense mass against which the formed processor. This was the evolution attempted by one of the men-of-war caught in the terrible burricane at bamoa a year or two ago in burricane at bamoa a year or two ago in burricane at bamoa a year or two ago in mid-air. Dreinched with the sait spray, becaumbed, yet clinging like death to the slippery shrouds, whiled and perked through the air by the writhing ship beneath them, held over the boiling caldron of waters now on the one side and the next instant on the other, it was a miracle that they were not every man of them snapped of and shot beadlong into the sea, and all the while, the Stygkan blackness of the night made lurid and infernal by the phosphorescent foam, and the elements roaring together with a din more horrible and desfening than forty million parks of artillery, and as many more locomotives, all thundering, howling, booming, and secreeching at once While these poor fellows were hanging on for dear life in the fore shrouds, other men were stationed with axes to cut away the mizzenmast the helm was put hard up. But the poor as hip, lacerated and exhausted, seemed unable to make any further effort, and lay helplessly wallowing and tumbling like a log. centre of the storm was directly north of us, and was rapidly passing. It meant also that we were not to leave our bones on the Paracels. As at proved, the evolution bad been performed under the fiercest blast we had that hight. It was nine o'check when we wore ship. The storm continued to rage with great fury. But the equalls came less frequently, and were less spiteful. By eleven it had so far spent itself that it was safe to begin to make sail. With the close-recfed foresail on her again she was steadler, and, orippled as she was, did her best to crawl out of the dread neighborhood in which she had so nearly met her doom. What that doom would have been, can be measured by the memory of soores of proud ships that have sailed out on the mysterious sea, for whom wives and mothers have watch-that have sailed out on the mysterious sea, for whom wives and mothers have watched and wept and prayed, but no tidings have ever come back. Or if the dread l'aracels had been our sepulchre, death would have been as certain and far more tragic. There are no islands in that submerged continent of graves, no friendly strand on which a poor drowning walf might possibly be cast by the waves, nothing but murderous ledges and wild tearing coral refs. Had the Saratoga struck there, five minutes would have sufficed to rend ship and crew into shreds and scatter them through miles of angry surf.

The next morning was a peaceful Sabbath. When I wend on deck at six beliethe sun was shining; the sea had quieted down, and a languid breeze was watting on gently onward. The sky and the occan
